Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week walking program, while the control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The walking program was designed to be low-intensity and supervised. The program consisted of three walking sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The walking speed was set at 1.5 miles per hour. The program was supervised by a research assistant. The control group was instructed to remain sedentary. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The primary outcome measure was the change in physical fitness, as measured by the 6-minute walk test. Secondary outcome measures included changes in body mass index (BMI), blood pressure, heart rate, and psychological health, as measured by the Beck Depression Inventory (BDI) and the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory (STAI). The results of the study showed that the walking program had a significant positive effect on physical fitness, as measured by the 6-minute walk test. The walking program also had a significant positive effect on psychological health, as measured by the BDI and the STAI. The control group showed no significant changes in physical fitness or psychological health. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve physical and psychological health in sedentary, middle-aged women.

Figure 1 consists of 12 panels, labeled A through L, each showing the growth of E. coli O157:H7 in ground beef over a 24-hour period under different treatment conditions. The y-axis for all panels is \log_{10} CFU/g, ranging from 0 to 10. The x-axis is time in hours, ranging from 0 to 24. Panel A (Control) shows a steady increase in bacterial count from approximately 10^2 to 10^8 CFU/g. Panels B through L show various treatments: 100% NaCl (B), 100% NaOH (C), 100% H_2O_2 (D), 100% HCl (E), 100% Acetic acid (F), 100% Citric acid (G), 100% Lactic acid (H), 100% Malic acid (I), 100% Tartaric acid (J), 100% Succinic acid (K), and 100% Fumaric acid (L). In all treated panels, the bacterial growth is significantly inhibited compared to the control, with most treatments resulting in counts below 10^4 CFU/g after 24 hours.

Significance of Least Squares

Figure 1 is a 3D plot showing the dependence of the rate of polymerization (R_p) on the concentration of the initiator (I_0) and the concentration of the monomer (M_0). The plot shows a surface that increases with both I_0 and M_0 . The axes are labeled I_0 , M_0 , and R_p . The surface is defined by the equation $R_p = k_p k_d^{-1/2} I_0^{1/2} M_0^2$.

Figure 2. JOURNAL 2002/03 for JOURNAL 2001/02 Four separate worksheets in one book with one worksheet per journal and one worksheet per publisher. Journals are listed in the first column, publishers in the second column, and the number of journals published by each publisher in the third column.
